

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

How many phases are there in group development?

Learning Outcome

Express duty, advice, willingness, or intention to do something in spoken or written texts and in work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- Why do you think it is hard to work in a group sometimes?
- Do you think there are different stages that a group goes through? Why or why not?

Can Do Statements

- I can discuss reasons and results of an event or action related to work and jobs.
- I can talk or report about things, actions, events, or people in a work environment.
- I can talk about group development.

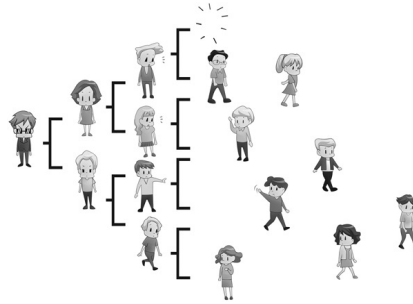

Let's Explore!

What happens before the group is disbanded?

* To "disband" means to break up a group of people.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

According to Bruce Tuckman, there are five phases of group development: forming, storming, norming, performing and adjourning. Groups can go back and forth between the phases, so they should not be seen as sequential.

Stage 1: In the forming stage, it is said by Tuckman that team members will look to the team leader for direction and supervision. Being accepted in the group is key at this stage, so group members will observe each other carefully. Members learn about the job before them and how to deal with one another.

Stage 2: The next stage is called storming, having been characterized by conflict and competition. As team members attempt to organize for the task, it has been suggested that questions arise among the group. These questions will result in conflicts over structure, leadership, authority and power.

Stage 3: In the norming stage, members are willing to change their preconceived opinions in response to the ideas and facts introduced by the other members of the team. Cliques disappear and leadership is shared. Having been accepted by the group, members start to warm up to one another. A growing level of trust fosters group cohesion. At this point, it has been agreed upon to solicit and share feelings, accept constructive feedback, and explore the range of possible actions related to the task.

Stage 4: The next stage, the performing stage, is difficult to attain. Members may work independently, in small groups, or all together. Their actions are well adjusted to the needs of the group. It is decided to place emphasis on achievement through problem-solving, hard work and productivity.

Stage 5: The final stage, adjourning, was suggested by Tuckman to include the disengagement from the task and the conclusion of relationships. Being given the opportunity, members say their personal goodbyes to each other. Having been recognized for their participation and achievement, the team is disbanded.

Let's Practice!

Reviewing words for group development.

Instructions: Circle the mistakes in the sentence.

1. The phases are not sequence, because groups can cycle through the phases.
2. Members are willing to change their preconceive ideas or opinions on the basis of facts presented by other members. Leadership is shared, and clicks dissolve.
3. It has been agreed to share feelings and ideas, solicitation and give feedback to one another, and explore actions related to the task.
4. Their roles dynamic adjust to the changing needs of the group and individuals.

Let's Practice!

The five phases have been *refined.

*means that something is developed and improved.

Instructions: Complete the sentences by choosing from the options you are given.

1. It was _____ by Tuckman that team members will look to the team leader for guidance.
a) say b) said c) saying
2. It _____ agreed to share feelings and ideas, solicit and give feedback to one another, and explore actions related to the task.
a) have been b) has been c) has be
3. The final stage, adjourning _____ by Tuckman to involve the termination of tasks.
a) was proposed b) was propose c) were proposed
4. Stage two _____ by conflict and confrontation.
a) have been characterized b) has been characterized c) has been characterizing

Extension Activity

Make a short video explaining Tuckman's five stages of group development.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Watch a video on "Tuckman Stages of Group Development" by Katy Jones online.
- Get into groups of three or four.
- Make a similar video explaining Tuckman's five stages of development on a phone or other video recording device.
- Next, write about your experience working in the group.
- How did your group experience relate to the different stages of group development?
- Write your experience in a 200-word document.

Self-Assessment

Yes No

I collaborate with a group.

☐ ☐

I plan and make a video with group members.

☐ ☐

I reflect on my experience working in the group.

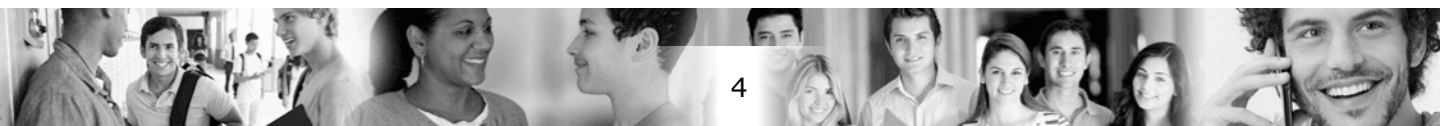

☐ ☐

I write about my experience.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- development (noun): the process of working on something to make it successful e.g. According to Bruce Tuckman, there are five phases of group development.
- sequential (adjective): happening in a set order
e.g. Groups can go back and forth between the phases, so they should not be seen as sequential.
- to arise (verb): to begin be caused or started by a situation
e.g. Questions arise among the group.
- preconceived (adjective): formed before you have enough knowledge or experience e.g. In the norming stage, members are willing to change their preconceived opinions in response to the ideas and facts introduced by the other members of the team.
- clique (noun): a small group of people who do not want other people to join them e.g. Cliques disappear and leadership is shared.
- to solicit (verb): to ask someone for help or information e.g. It has been agreed to solicit and share feelings, accept constructive feedback, and explore the range of possible actions related to the task.
- emphasis (noun): special attention or importance
e.g. It is decided to place emphasis on achievement through problem-solving, hard work and productivity.
- disengagement (noun): the process of withdrawing from involvement in a particular group e.g. The final stage, adjourning, was suggested by Tuckman to include the disengagement from the task.

Learning Points

Passive -ing Forms

You can use passive -ing forms (being + -ed or having been + -ed) as participles. These structures would imply the "since", "because of", "due to", "owing to" respectively.

Being paid monthly, I find it hard to pay all my bills on time.

Having been moved around as a child, she has no desire to do the same as an adult.

Examples:

- Being accepted in the group is key at this stage, so group members will observe each other carefully.
- Having been accepted by the group, members start to warm up to one another.
- Being given the opportunity, members say their personal goodbyes to each other.

Report Verbs with Impersonal Passive Constructions

When you want to report a fact or belief, you can use a variety of ways to construct your ideas. When you do not want to mention the source of the information, you can use a passive structure.

You can use the structure It + passive verb + to-infinitive. You can only use this pattern with the verbs agree, decide, suggest and propose.

It was agreed to promote the whole team at once.

If necessary, you can express the agent.

For example:

It was agreed by the managers to promote the whole team at once.

Examples:

- At this point, it has been agreed to solicit and share feelings, accept constructive feedback, and explore the range of possible actions related to the task.
- The final stage, adjourning, was suggested by Tuckman to include the disengagement from the task and the conclusion of relationships.

