

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Let's assess the team!

Learning Outcome

Describe the reasons or results of events or actions in spoken or written texts, in work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- Do you think people take on different roles in a team? What kind of roles are they?
- Why is it important to have different roles in a team?

Can Do Statements

- I can discuss reasons and results of an event or action related to work and jobs.
- I can talk or report about things, actions, events, or people in a work environment.
- I can talk about team roles.

Let's Explore!

Who will turn ideas into plans?

* To "turn something into" something else means to become something different.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Look at a team that is working at optimum performance, and you'll find that every member of that team has a clear role and responsibilities. Despite having clearly defined roles and responsibilities, a team still may fall short, not be working up to its full potential. Why? Dr. Belbin has observed people in teams are likely to take on different "team roles". Since a team is not at its best when it is unbalanced, it is important to make sure it has members with different styles of behavior, or roles, within the team. Belbin has identified nine different roles team members play that factor into team success. He has categorized these into: Action-Oriented, People-Oriented, and Thought-Oriented.

Action-Oriented Roles

- Shapers are dynamic, often extroverted people. They enjoy being the ones to challenge other team members to improve and excel at identifying the optimum approach to problems. They ensure the team looks at all possibilities. Shapers often view obstacles as interesting problems to be solved, but they can also be argumentative, and may offend others' feelings.
- Implementers are practical people, able to take the team's ideas and concepts and work out practical actions and plans to implement them. Generally, they tend to be conservative, efficient, and very well-organized people. You can rely on them to make sure that the job gets done. However, they can often not only be inflexible, but find change difficult and be a little resistant to it.
- Completer-Finishers make sure that things are completed thoroughly. They are detail-oriented and highly aware of the smallest details. As they are concerned with deadlines, they will push the team to ensure things are finished on, or before the time they are needed. They are ready to work harder in case unforeseen issues arise. They may be described as perfectionists who are conscientious and anxious. Delegating is not something they do well.

Let's Practice!

How to put a good team together.

Instructions: Unscramble the words to find the mystery sentence. Rewrite the sentences correctly.

1. expectations. / We / will / of / our / short / fall

2. and / a team will / Despite having / full potential. / clear roles / fall short / of its / responsibilities,

3. others' feelings. / be argumentative, / They can / and may offend

4. be somewhat / they may / be inflexible / and can / change. / However, / resistant to

5. detail-oriented / and pay / details. / close attention / They are / to small

Let's Practice!

The importance of teamwork.

Instructions: Read the sentences and select all the possible answers.

Select all the sentences that DON'T use the linking words.

- ☐ Since a team is not at its best when it is unbalanced, it is important to make sure it has members with different styles of behavior, or roles, within the team.
- ☐ The team has performed better than expected this month.
- ☐ As they are concerned with deadlines, they will push the team to ensure things are finished on, or before, the time they are needed.
- ☐ They excel at finding the best approaches in case there are any problems.
- ☐ Managers have to keep the team working at their best.
- ☐ They are ready to work harder in case unforeseen issues arise.
- ☐ Managers have to be careful not to push too hard.

Extension Activity

Create a PowerPoint presentation about action-oriented roles.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Work in pairs.
- Create a PowerPoint or Prezi presentation about action-oriented roles.
- Make the presentation 2-4 minutes in length.
- Explain each role: shaper, implementer, completer-finisher.
- Explain the personalities of the people in those roles and give some examples.
- Explain the contributions and allowable weaknesses of each role.

Self-Assessment

Yes No

I collaborate with a partner.

☐ ☐

I create a PowerPoint presentation that is interesting.

☐ ☐

I explain action-oriented roles clearly and concisely.

☐ ☐

I explain the different types of personalities in the particular roles.

☐ ☐

I explain the contributions and allowable weaknesses of each role.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- to fall short (expression): to fail to attain a specified amount, level, or degree
e.g. We will fall short of our expectations.
- full potential (expression): succeed as well as you possibly can e.g. Despite having clear roles and responsibilities, a team will fall short of its full potential.
- team role (noun): the position that someone has in a group of people who have been chosen to work together to do a particular job e.g. Dr. Belbin has observed people in teams are likely to take on different "team roles."
- unbalanced (adjective): not equal because one person has more influence, power etc.
e.g. Since a team is not at its best when it is unbalanced, it is important to make sure it has members with different styles.
- to categorize (verb): to put people or things into groups with the same features e.g. He has categorized those roles into three groups.
- argumentative (adjective): someone who often argues with others or enjoys arguing e.g. They can be argumentative, and may offend others' feelings.
- inflexible (adjective): unwilling to make even the slightest change in one's attitudes, plans etc.
e.g. However, they may be inflexible and can be somewhat resistant to change.
- detail oriented (adjective): spending a lot of time, effort, or attention to details e.g. They are detail-oriented and pay close attention to small details.

Learning Points

Reason Clauses: Since, As, Just in case

There are different linking words you can use to introduce reason clauses. Using this type of structure helps to make your writing and speaking sound more professional.

Since and As

You use since and as to introduce reasons that the listener or reader already knows.

For example:

Since you're new here, I can show you around the office.

As you've already been introduced to everyone, we can begin the meeting.

(Just) in case

You use just in case to talk about things that may possibly happen.

For example:

I'll send you the outline again just in case you forget it at home.

Examples:

- Since a team is not at its best when it is unbalanced, it is important to make sure it has members with different styles of behavior, or roles, within the team.
- As they are concerned with deadlines, they will push the team to ensure things are finished on, or before, the time they are needed.
- They are ready to work harder in case unforeseen issues arise.

Learning Points

The Simple Present, Present Continuous and Present Perfect Tenses

It is important not to confuse the name of a verb tense with the way you use it to talk about time.

A Present tense does not always refer to present time - it can refer to the future or the past.

Let's review and compare the present tenses.

Tense	Past	Present	Future
Simple Present		I need a coffee.	She arrives tomorrow.
Present Continuous		I'm having lunch with friends right now.	I'm meeting her tomorrow for coffee.
Present Perfect	I have seen the movie Titanic.	I have completed all my work.

Examples:

- When a team is performing at its best, you'll usually find that each team member has a clear role and clear responsibilities.
- Dr. Belbin has observed people in teams are likely to take on different "team roles."
- Since teams can become unbalanced, it is important to have team members with different styles of behavior or team roles.
- Belbin has identified nine team roles.
- They play a factor in team success.

